CONFERENCE PAPERS

STATEMENT

Prior to his appointment at Princeton University (in 2009), the candidate was employed in industry (2000-2008), where the policy was to publish mostly in conferences where live presentations and face-to-face meetings represented important means of outreach and marketing to potential clients. Journal papers were not considered as important because they were read mostly by the academic community, which represented a relatively small part of the candidate's former employer's business. Consequently, during that time, the candidate published 80 conference papers (and only eight journal papers). To make the list of publications concise, emphasizing the contributions created while at Princeton University, only the list of conference papers published since 2009 is included. The complete list can be found at the candidate's website or delivered upon request.
